

A.P. Gilfoyle

Fraud and Impersonation Awareness Notice

A.P. Gilfoyle Investment Management LLC ("A.P. Gilfoyle") is aware that fraudsters and bad actors may attempt to impersonate our firm, our personnel, or our affiliated entities for the purpose of soliciting investments, obtaining personal or financial information, or otherwise deceiving members of the public. We take these matters seriously and wish to make the following disclosures.

Official Communications

All official correspondence from A.P. Gilfoyle originates exclusively from email addresses ending in @apg-invest.com or @apgilfoyle.com. Any communication purporting to be from A.P. Gilfoyle that originates from a different domain — including lookalike domains, free email services such as Gmail or Yahoo, or any variation of our firm name — should be treated as suspicious and potentially fraudulent.

A.P. Gilfoyle will never solicit investments, request wire transfers, ask for account credentials, or demand payment of fees or taxes as a condition of releasing funds via unsolicited email, text message, phone call, or social media contact.

Common Fraud Schemes to Be Aware Of

Impersonation fraud targeting investment firms typically takes several forms. Advance fee fraud involves fraudsters promising high investment returns and then requesting upfront fees, taxes, or processing charges before any funds are released. Recovery scams target individuals who have already been victimized, with the fraudster posing as a recovery firm or regulator and requesting payment to recover lost funds. Spoofed communications involve the use of logos, letterhead, or contact information that closely mimics a legitimate firm's branding to deceive recipients into believing they are dealing with an authorized entity.

How to Protect Yourself

If you receive a communication claiming to be from A.P. Gilfoyle and are uncertain of its legitimacy, do not respond, transfer funds, or provide personal information until you have independently verified the sender's identity through our official contact channels.

We encourage anyone who may be targeted by investment fraud or impersonation schemes to consult the following resources for guidance and assistance:

- The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) — www.ic3.gov — accepts complaints related to internet crime and investment fraud.
- The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) — www.investor.gov — provides investor education resources and accepts tips, complaints, and referrals.

Reporting Misuse

If you have encountered unauthorized use of the A.P. Gilfoyle name, logo, or brand identity, or if you have received a communication you believe to be fraudulent and purporting to represent our firm, please report it to us
